New Front End Loader

Evans & Nash, contractors, put this new 977 front end loader to work last week, grading a piece of property on Patricia Ann Lane, Appomattox. Operator is Kenneth Nash. Evans & Nash has been in operation more than 40 major pieces of equipment for highway construction and other projects. The front end loader willmove three cubic yards of material at a time and will be used locally, says David Nash, for grading and clearing for new homes and other projects.

URGES PROTECTION OF SCHOOL SYSTEM

'Time Grows Short' Says Abbitt

WASHINGTON – Representative Watkins M. Abbitt (D-Va.) warned that time is growing short for Congress to act to clarify the scope of Federal executive and judicial authority to control school assignments.

The Virginia Congressman, in a speech in the House, urged Members to sign a discharge petition on a proposed Constitutional amendment to which 143 signatures have been secured. Under House procedure 218 signatures are required to bring the issue to the floor which, in effect, would by-pass the House Judiciary Committee.

Abbitt told the House that although the Judiciary Committee has scheduled hearings beginning March 1 on the proposed Constitutional amendment, he feels that reliance on the normal committee procedure would mean no action in this session of Congress on the anti-busing issue.

"In my opinion, we have already waited much too long and allowed far too much authority to be shifted from the local school systems to HEW bureaucracy and judicial oligarchy" Abbitt said. "We cannot wait much longer – or else that which we seek to protect will be so diluted it will not longer be worth saving."

Urging Members to sign the discharge petition to protect America's public school system, Abbitt asserted that "it is nothing short of disgraceful that we have sat back and allowed this system to eteriorate at the hands of theorists, sociologists and misguided reformers."

Abbitt said it is "imperative" that Congress act now in face of the recent Richmond consolidation decision and other pending judicial actions elsewhere in the nation. He said the Richmond school decision "is a great example of arrogant judicial tyranny, conceived in premeditated favoritism, clothed in usurpation of power, and rendered without regard for the ultimate consequences. It is bereft of compassion for the public good, bathed in illogical philosophy, and aimed at placating a few at the expense of many."

He said the Richmond decision has aroused much bitterness throughout the nation and should be an incentive to Members of Congress who have not yet taken a position on the Constitutional amendment. "From all over America have come cries of disbelief over the scope of the Richmond decision," Abbitt said. "Nothing like it has yet been forceden the people of this nation and hopefully the higher courts will realize that to travel the road charted by the District Court would be disastrous for school districts all across the country."

The Congressman was sharply critical of expanding judicial roles in dictating assignments to public schools. "We have entered upon an era in which courts now seek to force the combination of school districts in order to achieve that which could not be accomplished with in an independent school district. If this can be done in the area of school assignments, who is to say that it cannot be accomplished in all other functions of government. It is frightening and preposterous to view the possibility that forced integration of the schools might eventually become a sledgehammer to remold our entire governmental system in America," Abbitt said.

The Virginian asserted that HEW is "daily diminishing the substance of education by preoccupation with percentage assignments" and said Congress should re-examine programs of Federal aid to education to see if they are being harmed by concentration on percentage balances. "If we are to expend all of our efforts on maintaining equal balance in every school in America," he said, "then we may as well admit now that education is no longer an individual inspiration but a statistical folly."

Eye Donors Asked To Carry Cards

RICHMOND, VA. – Those Virginia citizens who have pledged the donation of their eyes, on death, to the Old Dominion Eye Bank for use in sight-restoring corneal transplant operations are asked to carry their eye donor pledge cards with them at all times.

That was the plea issued today by R. Kenneth Hudgins, Executive Director of the eye bank. Hudgins said that the ultimate success of this sight-restoring program is entirely dependent upon the eye bank's being notified immediately in the event of the death of a donor. In such cases, he said, time is a critical factor, because the eye tissue must be removed within six hours after death if it is to be effectively used in a corneal transplant operation.

When an eye donor suffers an accidental death, Hudgins said, police officers and medical personnel characteristically check a wallet or pocketbook for identification. If the donor card is attached to such identification, he added, the police and medical aides recognize that immediate action is necessary.

Otherwise, said Hudgins, too much time is likely to elapse before the eye tissue is removed.

Tax Deductions Listed In IRS Tables

RICHMOND – Virginia taxpayers who itemize deductions, can deduct for sales tax on Federal tax returns the amount which appears in tables printed in the 1040 tax instructions, James P. Boyle, District Director of Internal Revenue for Virginia, said the tables show the sales tax deduction by family size and income.

The table is based on consumer spending patterns and shows the average sales tax paid by Virginia residents, he said.

The titling tax on automobiles paid in 1971 may be deducted in addition to the sales taxes shown in the table.

The table is furnished as a guide for the convenience of taxpayers who do not keep detailed records of payments. Taxpayers who prefer to deduct the actual amount of state sales taxes paid during the year should have records as proof of payment, Mr. Boyle said.
